CANNON TELLS OF LINCOLN'S
TWO DEBATES

Rivalry With Douglas Recalled by Veteran Former Speaker of House

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Abraham Lincoln's famous series of debates with Stephen A. Douglas, and his appearance at the Illinois state convention which put him forward for the presidential nomination in 1860, were intimately described today—Lincoln's birthday—by former speaker Joseph G. Cannon, the only living member of congress who was personally acquainted with the martyred president.

Cannon, nearly 87 years old, and with a record of 46 years in congress back of him, was a rising young lawyer and politician in the annals of the state, when "the little giant" and the "rail splitter" were contending for the United States senate.

Heard Big Debates
"I heard two of the debates between Lincoln and Douglas," Uncle Joe told International News Service. "One at Sullivan and the other at Charleston. I think I have journeyed over the state to hear the others if walking had not been so poor."

"It was a wonderful contest between giants. Douglas was remarkably strong and resourceful. Lincoln failed to reach the senate, but the whole country was aflame and at the end of those great debates he had a national, if not a world wide reputation."

"When 1860 came Illinois concluded to make him her candidate for the nomination for president. We met at Decatur, Ill.; I was a delegate there in a wagon sixty miles across the prairie."

"The convention was held in a structure erected between two brick buildings, with posts cut from the forest, and covered with bows cut from the forest—the ends open."

"Just about the time the convention was organized a voice came: 'Make way for Dick Oglesby and John Hanks.'"

"They came through bearing two walnut rails. These two rails were set up and there was a legend on strip of cloth: 'These rails were made by John Hanks and Abraham Lincoln.'"

"The cry came for Lincoln—great, tall, gaunt man that he was, he literally picked him up and passed him over the heads of the crowd."

"Somebody had asked him if it was proper for him to be there, as he was a candidate for the presidency."

Made No Speeches
"A queer expression came over Lincoln's face and he said: 'The truth is I am most too much of a candidate to be here, but hardly enough to stay away.'"

The crowd people were swept off their feet in that convention and a delegation unanimously chosen consisting of personal and political friends of Lincoln, who went to Chicago, to that convention held two or three weeks later in the wigwag."

"You know the result. Then came the campaign. Lincoln behaved very well. He did not make speeches. He answered a few letters."

"I saw him once after the election at Springfield. He was on his way. In a day coach and without companions, to go to Charleston to meet for the last time the old stepmother who called him 'my boy Ab.'"

The death of Mrs. R. S. Smith, 49, took place Sunday morning at her home in East Cleveland. She was formerly a resident of the Gulf Road. She is survived by her husband and the following brothers and sisters: Felix Pauley, Gulf Road; Mrs. Edward Flood, 160 West River Road; Mrs. O. M. With Adversaries in Struggle to Force Vote
Before Present Session
Expires

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The administration's ship subsidy bill, heralded by its supporters as the only means of saving the American merchant marine from destruction, today entered the closing stages of the long fight for its enactment.

A series of legislative obstacles faced the measure in the forms of test votes, which must be hurled in the next two or three days to insure its passage by the present congress. If supporters of the bill are defeated on any one of the tests, all the chance for its ultimate enactment, probably, will be lost. While administration forces were still hopeful as they rallied their ranks for the test vote, there was no assurance their fight would be successful.

One ray of hope appeared today in a report that "farm bloc" republicans, hitherto unequivocally opposed to the bill, would give their support if it were amended to subsidize only cargo ships. This proposed amendment, however, did not meet the favor of the democratic opponents. The latter declared the measure would have to be limited to a single year before they would permit it to come to a final vote. This provision would eliminate the fifteen year contracts now provided in the bill.

An announcement by Senator Jones, republican of Washington, in charge of the bill that he would request unanimous consent for limiting debate after Friday, stirred the opposition. It was conceded the request would be refused and there was a possibility Jones might force a test vote immediately by putting his request as a formal motion.

Open Forum Speaker Describes Operations of Mines and What Unions Do For Workers

"What's the matter with the coal industry?" was the subject of James H. Maurer's talk before the open forum at the Church of Christ yesterday afternoon. As president of the Pennsylvania American Federation of Labor, he has had a first hand chance to study the business, and his conclusions are therefore worthy of consideration.

He started in first giving a description of a typical mining village, and home in the bituminous region of Pennsylvania, or most any coal producing State. Four room shacks, with no conveniences were provided the men at about $8 per month. The mines themselves were also described, and the different processes explained.

The speaker told of the difference between a union and a non-union mine. He stated that at Somerset, Pa., in the non-union district the men work all day and at night do not know how much coal they have mined, because it is weighed by a company man. He declared that the men received no pay in one out of five trains of coal leaving the mine, on account of being cheated in weight. The men were obliged to buy from the company store, furnish their own tools, powder, oil and so forth, and he does not know how much he has earned until he draws his pay. At that time his rent, store bill, and all expenses are taken out, and he is handed $1 for the week. If he objects he is disciplined and may be discharged and blacklisted so that he cannot get another job.

How Coal Is Mined
At a union mine the weighing is done by two men, one of whom is employed by the miners. There are but few company stores, but if there is one the men do not have to patronize it unless they desire to. They spend their money where they please. If they are discharged and feel they have a grievance they go to their committee and report, and the case is investigated. If the man has been rightfully discharged he has no redress, but if case is wrong the superintendent and he is returned to work. In many other ways the union protects the miner.

To Vacate Waters in Three Days

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The British government is without confirmation from General Harrington, British commander at Constantinople, that the Turks have issued a new "ultimatum" to foreign warships to leave Smyrna harbor, it was announced by the foreign office this afternoon.

The Turkish authorities at Constantinople have delivered a verbal message to the allied high commissioners which is regarded as conciliatory and which is bound to be the forerunner of a formal communication in which the Turks will yield completely to the allies.

Reports of the new Turkish demand and the news that the allied naval commanders at Smyrna would reject it were contained in newspaper despatches from Constantinople; not in official advices. According to these telegrams the Turks had demanded that foreign warships depart from Smyrna harbor within three days.

According to reliable news from Constantinople Turkish extremists at Angora, believing that a definite rupture took place in the Lausanne peace conference, are seeking to cause all the trouble they can. Mustafa Kemal Pasha and other Turkish leaders are attempting to hold the extremists in check. Kemal and his close colleagues are understood to desire peace.

Many People Revived.
Firemen, equipped with gas masks, invaded the section of the town where the creeping gas was entering business houses and homes and rescued a dozen people who had been overcome and who were later revived.The dead:

Mrs. B. Buccell, 40 years old.
Norma Buccell, 17 years old.
Josephine Buccell, 15 years old.
Furina Buccell, 10 years old.
Louis Buccell, 4 years old.
Buccell and his daughter, Josephine, evidently awakened by the odor of gas had tried to reach the street and spread an alarm. They were found fully clothed, lying in a hallway on the first floor of their home near a door.

Discovery of the grim tragedy was made by Jacob Kahn who was riding opposite the Buccell residence. He detected a strong odor of gas pouring from the street.

Four Die in Bed.
He ran across to the Buccell home and after repeated knocking, had forced open a window.

Groping his way through the stifling odor of gas, he found the bodies of Buccell and Josephine at the foot of the stairs. He found the other members of the family in bed dead. They had been overcome in sleep.

Stepping to the street Kahn made his way to the first house and gave an alarm.

Donning gas masks the firemen went to the Buccell home and carried out the victims.

Doctor May Die.
Threats were threatened to wipe out the family of Dr. E. D. Blackman, a dentist, who resides across the street from the Buccell family. Dr. Blackman may die.

Daniel F. Blackman, a brother of Dr. Blackman, and his sister, Evangeline Blackman, living next door, were also overcome but were revived by pulmonologists.

Three other members of the Daniel F. Blackman family were rescued at ten o'clock this morning. THE SPIRIT OF LINCOLN

Millions of people today have their thoughts directed to the life of Abraham Lincoln. Thousands of speakers are calling attention to the traits of character, and the remarkable personality, and to the singular enigma embodied in that remarkable man. Many of them undoubtedly have expressed the wish that we had a man of such patience, and foresight and consecrated common sense to lead the world out of its present trouble.

But after all, that isn't the way matters are accomplished in the world, under the providence of the Creator. We have the character of Lincoln to study. We have the opportunity to view his work in the most troublesome period of America's history, and we see shot through it all a patience and charity, especially a charity, which probably transcends that of any other man who has filled official position in any country since time began.

We have an opportunity to view his work, and see it even more clearly than did his contemporaries. We see it in its true perspective. The spirit which was breathed in his "with malice toward none, with charity toward all, with a firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right," we note now, was the controlling factor in his own activity, and has been a softening and moulding influence upon the citizens of America both North and South since the Civil war.

We can best show our appreciation of that spirit, and our devotion to his memory, by applying the truth which his life and language taught to ourselves, and to our relations with our fellows and our relations to the world. This is the sense in which the lives of others are the heritage of the world.

It would be amusing if it were not so pathetic, to note the people who are orating on, speaking of, and alleged to be worshipping the memory of Abraham Lincoln, who fail to square their lives and their attitude to the great social needs of the world, in any respect with the principles that dominate that great character.

WHAT IS REALLY IMPORTANT

Rabbi Wise has gotten into the newspapers along side of Dr. Grant of New York, by declaring that he doesn't believe that God ever wrote the Ten Commandments on the tablets of stone, and he comes into the controversy to sustain Dr. Grant.

We aren't so much worried as to whether God wrote them on the tablets of stone Himself or whether Moses chiseled them, or whether they were ever on any tablets of stone, as we are whether they pronounced great truths. We imagine that is Rabbi Wise's position also. There is a great deal more discussion over the immaterial things than there is over the really important matters, or may it be that the unimportant matters get onto the front page of the newspapers.

BEATING THE NEW PATH

In the death notices of the widow of the late Robert G. Ingersoll, there were statements declaring that she held to the religious views of her former husband. The truth is, that a perusal of the Ingersoll lectures brings one to the conclusion that there are a large proportion of the orthodox church members of today who hold the same, or even more liberal, views concerning the Bible, and the Dicty of Jesus Christ than did Mr. Ingersoll.

Mr. Ingersoll would be ridiculing and attacking views which hardly exist anywhere today, if he uttered the same speeches which he delivered twenty-five years ago. In fact some of his attacks then, were upon ideas which very few had held for fifty years. The iconoclast of today may be the conservative of tomorrow. The new path soon becomes the beaten path if it leads to a definite destination.

WHO'S WHO IN THE DAY'S NEWS

GEORGE LE BOUTILLIER

When Ralph Peters retires from the presidency of the Long Island Railroad, which holds the world's record as a carrier of commuters, it is expected his successor will be George Le Boutillier. That fact is not startling in itself but it takes on a new significance when one learns that a twenty-eight years old Peters singled out Le Boutillier, then a youth of 19 as one of three promising young men working for the old Pan Handle system at Cincinnati.

The other two have fulfilled his prophecy, one is president of the Pennsylvania lines and the other has been knighted by the King of England and made president and general manager of the Canadian National Railways.

Last month Le Boutillier was called from his home in Harrisburg, Pa., and without any preliminaries was offered the vice-presidency of the Long Island railroad. When Peters retires next fall because the law of the road requires it as he is seventy years old, it is expected Le Boutillier will take his place.

Le Boutillier was born in Cincinnati forty-seven years ago. The name is French. His great grandfather, driven from France by the Edict of Nantes, settled on the island of Guernsey. His grandfather, with three sons, came to the United States in 1837. His father, James Le Boutillier, settled in Ohio by tracing the movements of Le Boutillier back to his seventeenth year, we find that he was a messenger boy during two school vacations in the office of the division superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Cincinnati. His pay was $30 a month. He shagged from office to office, carrying official papers, an didn't even wear a uniform.

Later young George studied civil engineering at the University of Cincinnati three years, after which he lost so much time because of the illness of an uncle that he did not go back. Instead he got a job on August 1, 1896, carrying chain and rod in a Pennsylvania Railroad survey party at $50 a month.

FRENCH SURGEON OPERATES UNDER SELF-ANESTHESIA

A method of self-induced anesthesia borrowed from the fakirs of Northern Africa has been reached in France with excellent results, according to American Medicine. It consists of the rapid practice of deep breathing, and minor operations are performed painlessly at the moment of the rapid and deep breathing produces dizziness in the subject.

A French physician, after extensive study of the practices of the fakirs and miracle performers of Northern Africa, particularly the tribe of Alasodas, who drive nails through their hands or even into their skulls without evidence of any sign of pain, has captured the secret—a principle of nature hitherto either unrevealed or disregarded. In studying the methods of these fakirs it was observed that before attempting their feats they indulged in preliminary exercises which it was at first thought were merely meant to impress their audiences, but which now appear to be an indispensable preparation for their performance.

The fakir would first take deep breathing exercises, his respiration increasing in rapidity and in depth.

until finally he reaches a state bordering on what appears to be frenzy but is really what may be described as a trance. This trance, it was discovered, was not feigned but actual. Once he has reached this stage the fakir is ready for his stunt. He will drive a nail through his palm or through the flesh of his upper arm, and in some instances he has been known to drive a nail into his skull, in each case without drawing blood and without giving any evidence of pain.

At first it was believed that the fakir was merely hardened by experience and training, like our own Indians, to suffer pain without reacting to it, but it was soon learned that he really felt no pain at all, that his trance was a form of self-induced anesthesia, and that the preliminary deep breathing exercises acted as an anesthetic which lasted just long enough to permit the particular stunt, and then wore off without leaving the fakir any the worse for his experience.

Drawing his conclusions from these performances, Dr. Ward began a series of experiments in minor operations, all confirming the fact that deep-breathing exercises before the operations, properly conducted, acted as an anesthetic.

Wilson Puts On Fifteen Pounds

Cleveland Man Writes Friends in Scotland About His Benefits From Tanlac.

"Tanlac has been such a fine thing for me that I have even written some of my friends in Scotland about its goodness," said John M. Wilson, 606 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, O., recently.

"Last summer I worked on a farm and got in a terribly rundown condition. My appetite so completely went back on me that even a good wholesome country meal wouldn't coax me back. A sour stomach, cramping pains and shortness of breath kept me pretty well used up, and the headaches and dizzy spells were fearful. My back ached so bad I could hardly do any lifting and I came in at night so tired and worn-out I couldn't half sleep.

"But Tanlac soon pulled me out of the ditch. Four bottles of the medicine knocked my troubles a kiting, and I have put on fifteen pounds in weight besides. Why, it seems like I have enough strength and energy to last a life-time, and I want my friends and everybody else to know that Tanlac is what fixed me up."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.—Adv.

REVIVALS BEGIN AT M. E. CHURCH

Revival services began at the Methodist church here last night. Large crowds greeted the pastor at both morning and evening services. In the morning "Go to church Sunday" was observed by the young men's Bible class under the leadership of C. M. Williams. The class attended in the body and made a very creditable showing. Dr. Kirby's theme was "Pentecost and Revival."

He argued that there could be no great revival without the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon those who are to be leaders in that revival. The evening theme was "Oh Love! Wonderful Love." "The love of God," the pastor said, "was shown to be the most wonderful love that has ever been demonstrated."

Last night was the opening service of a revival campaign. Mr. Vickers who led the singing at the revival services last year was present and led the singing. He will be in charge of the music throughout the meetings and tonight will sing "The Ninety and Nine" as a solo appropriate to the sermon which will be on the parable of "The Lost Sheep."

The following four nights of the week the themes of the sermons will be found in "The Parable of the Sower" and each sermon will deal with one of the kinds of ground mentioned by the Savior in that parable.

The services will begin promptly at 7:30 o'clock each evening except Saturday and after tonight the regular service will be preceded by a prayer of half an hour in the Men's Bible class-room. Every one is cordially invited to attend every service.

Of all living creatures the most terrible in combined jaw power and equipment of teeth is the shark. The hammer-head shark may have as many as five rows of triangular teeth, while a tiger shark can sever a man's body with a single bite, exercising a jaw power of at least a ton.

The claws of a bear are terrible weapons, and as the strength behind them it is almost incalculable. A grizzly can break the back of a horse with a single blow.

U. S. Control

fects the men from being imposed upon. He declared that labor leaders were not responsible for strikes as was popularly believed. The men struck themselves after every effort had been made to arbitrate the differences.

Discussing the cost of coal he stated that bituminous coal at the mine was sold for at the rate of $1.38 a ton for hand work and 96c a ton for machine work. A fair price on the average would be $2.35. By the time the consumer gets it they have to pay from $5.50 to $12 a ton. The men earn from $7.50 to $9 per day, but he explained that many of them worked but 5 days in a year, and the highest number of days was 225. The whole trouble he declared was caused by overdeveloping of the bituminous coal industry. It was capable of producing one billion tons more coal than the market called for. There were 150,000 more miners in the bituminous district than can be successfully used, and the companies are constantly bringing in men from Europe, and the colored men of the south, which makes conditions worse. He declared the young men of that district should get out. The old men had been miners all their lives, and knew nothing else, and they should be allowed to stay and work the mines.

The anthracite industry is different, he stated. The demand for that class of coal is growing, but the number of mines is not. Even now, however, all the men are not working as the railroad men in some localities are still on strike, and while coal is ready to be mined, the roads lack for the motive power to move it.

"Who is to blame for the conditions spoken of?" he asked. "Society is the arch criminal, and then comes Wall street. It is because of these things it is because we do not think. The average American does not like to think. He forms his opinions by reading newspapers and by what he can hear in roundabout ways, and then expresses his opinions."

Cost of Mining

Anthracite miners' 65c a ton for their work, which is considered good pay. The operators claim it costs about $3.92 to mine. The State labor board of Pennsylvania claims it costs but $3. He said the Lehigh Valley railroad owned most of the mines. They got their profit from mining, then sold it to one of their subsidiary companies, who sold it to another subsidiary of theirs, and after being hauled by their own road, it finally reached the wholesaler, who sold it to the retailer. The Lehigh people got three or four profits before it got to the wholesaler, the wholesaler got his, and the retailer of course got his. He declared that the retailer did not make an unnecessary profit. It developed during the discussion that hard coal sells in Elyria at $15.50 a ton, with 5c off for cash, but dealers charge $19 a ton at Oberlin.

Many Miners Killed

In defense of the miner's claims for a living wage, he spoke feelingly of the widow's contribution to the coal business. He stated an average of 1,200 men a year lose their lives in the mines in Pennsylvania alone, besides many thousands are permanently or partially disabled. "The miners," he declared, "are paying the price, and if anyone thinks they are going to work for less, they are mistaken."

In conclusion he gave the remedy as he believed for all this situation and trouble. Take the profit out of the industry and stop exploiting mother earth. Stop mining coal for greed. Let the government buy the mines, for public ownership is inevitable, and we are bound to come to it," he declared.

This semi-dress suit, designed Claire, reflects the Orient in its intricate embroidery and short box-jacket. It is made of black crepe unbordered in white. The skirt is about ankle length, but seems longer because of the double wide panel with its long fringe which hangs below the skirt hem.

They Combat the Film

Those people you see everywhere with whiter, cleaner, safer teeth

Go now and ask for this delightful test. Learn how easy it is to fight film on teeth.

You see glistening teeth wherever you look today. Learn how people get them.

There is now a new method of teeth cleaning which millions have adopted. Dentists the world over now advise it. Careful people of some 50 nations now employ it daily. Find out what they know.

That dingy film

That viscous film you feel on teeth is their great enemy. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays.

Food stains, etc., discolor it, then it forms dingy coats. Tartar is based on film. That's why teeth lose luster.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. That's why few escaped tooth troubles.

Germs breed in film by millions. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Also of other serious troubles.

Old ways inadequate

No ordinary tooth paste effectively combats film. So the tooth brush left much film intact.

Dental science has now found two ways to fight that film. One acts to curdle film, one to remove it, and without any harmful scouring.

Able authorities proved these methods effective. Then a new-type tooth paste was created, based on modern research. Those two film

Avoid Harmful Grit

Pepsodent curdles the film and removes it without harmful scouring. Its polishing agent is far softer than enamel. Never use a film combant which contains harsh grit.

Some 50 nations use it now

This is part of a world-wide crusade for better tooth protection. Pepsodent is now used in homes of some 50 nations, largely by dental advice.

combatants were embodied in it for daily application.

That tooth paste is called Pepsodent. To millions of homes the world over it is bringing a new dental era.

Other new effects

Pepsodent does other things which research proves essential. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids, the cause of tooth decay.

It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

Thus Pepsodent gives manifold power to these great natural tooth-protecting agents.

New beauty comes

See what new beauty comes from whiter teeth. Learn the new daintiness that comes from cleaner teeth. You will be amazed and delighted.

Go get this free tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

You will want these results continued for everyone in your home. Cut out the coupon now.

WOMAN SLAYER NOW BATTLES
FOR LIFE SHE SOUGHT TO END

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—A woman's plea—a man's scorn—a single shot—a slumping form—a frantic flight—then bitter remorse—and three unsuccessful attempts at self destruction. That's the story behind the murder trial of Mrs. Paulette Saludes, dark and pretty, a perfect French type, for the slaying of Oscar Martelliere, broker.

Back still farther is the story of a woman's unrequited love which cost her everything she had in the world, her husband, wealth and happiness; everything but one—her life. And now that is at stake.

Born in France, just a ninety-pound bundle of French temperament from the tips of her toes to the top of her curly head, she came to America with her husband in search of wealth and happiness.

Then Saludes became interested in a lumber company, with Martelliere and others including James A. Turley, now her attorney. And Martelliere, according to Turley, became a cloud on the horizon of pretty Paulette's life.

Almost immediately, Turley charges, Martelliere began to betray his associates. He persuaded Saludes to go to Europe to collect accounts owing the company for lumber shipments. With Mrs. Saludes and other members of the company Martelliere was at the pier to wave farewell to Saludes.

Then things began to happen quickly, according to Mrs. Saludes and her attorney. "After my husband had gone," Mrs. Saludes said in telling her story, "Martelliere came. He blamed Turley for an effort to throw the company into bankruptcy. But he alone was responsible. He destroyed my confidence in Turley and for a long time we were not on speaking terms."

Then he carefully planted the seed of distrust in my soul by telling me that I had lost my husband's love. I was distracted. I saw ruin overtaking us.

"Martelliere began making love to me—passionate love—and I fell. I believed him. He took my honor as ruthlessly as he took my property and my auto. Then when I had nothing more to give he scorned me. In despair I turned to Turley. But Martelliere only laughed—it was a cold, ironical laugh that I shall never forget—and said, 'Go as far as you like.'"

Realizing that her case was hopeless, Mrs. Saludes said she decided to make one last appeal to Martelliere.

She went to his office. Again she heard that cold, cruel laugh and once more felt the sting of his biting scorn.

Mrs. Saludes says she doesn't remember much after that.

"I saw him as a most hideous monster, cruel, calculating, vicious. I tried to kill myself. That's all I remember."

The state says Mrs. Saludes shot Martelliere there in his office.

Turley says she returned to his office and made an unsuccessful attempt to end her woes by leaping from his office window. Follen in this, she attempted to shoot herself. Police prevented another attempted leap.

Now the state seeks to do what Mrs. Saludes failed to do—take her life—according to the old code of "an eye for an eye."

Movie of Mrs. Paulette Saludes on trial for murder.

NEWS NOTES FROM MOVIELAND

Hedda Hopper, who appeared in pictures with various stars, is going to resume work in films. She is now in Europe traveling about taking a rest and hunting new material for film and stage plays. She writes back that the strange sights intrigue her but that she met at least one person with whom she is very well acquainted.

Upon stepping into a little theater just off the Champs Elysees, the first person to meet her eyes on the screen was none other than Hedda Hopper. The picture was an old one, "Virtuous Wives" in which Miss Hopper played with Anita Stewart. Other pictures which Miss Hopper played in before her brief retirement from the screen were "The Isle of Conquest" with Norma Talmadge, "Seven Keys to Baldpate" with George Cohan, and "The Third Degree."

What They're Doing. Herbert Brenon is in the second week on his first Paramount production, "The Rustle of Silk," starring Betty Compson.

Kathryn McGuire's contract with Mack Sennett has expired and now the actress is free-lancing her latest engagement being with Clara Kimball Young in "The Woman of Bronze."

Edwin Carewe has gone away on location for scenes in "The Girl of the Golden West," which he is producing for Associated First National, with Sylvia Breamer in the title role and J. Warren Kerrigan and Russell Simpson in other important parts.

Edward Martindel is hanging his hat at the Fox studios, playing in "The Eleventh Hour," with Shirley Mason.

7 ELYRIANS ON CARD AT LORAIN

LORAIN, Feb. 12.—Jimmy Russell, of Ashland, and Billy Palmer, of Cleveland, have been signed to box the ten-round main go of a fight to be staged here in the Eagle hall on the night of February 26.

The semi-final attraction will be between Leonard Kauff, of Cleveland, and Lloyd Hybert, of Ashland.

Other bouts on the card are: Butch Carney of Cleveland, and Sammy Marasco of Elyria, and Peter, of Ashland, and Carl Finnegan, of Elyria.

Kipton Teams Defeat South Amherst Fives

SOUTH AMHERST, Feb. 12.—The South Amherst High School teams went down to defeat Friday evening before the Kipton High School aggregations. The visitors took the lead in both games soon after the toss-up and were never in real danger of being headed.

The girls' game was somewhat one-sided although the home team put up a hard fight. The work of the visiting guards was too much for the South Amherst forwards and had few chances at the basket.

The lineup and summary: Kipton 17, South Amherst 1. Buckler, c. R. F. Schriener. Obitis, ... L. F. Gleason. Ingersoll, ... C. Nickel. Huene, ... R. G. Wilhelm. Bradley, ... L. C. Hahn. Field Goals—Buckler 4, Obitis 3.

Goals from Free Throw—Buckler 3, Schriener 1.

The visiting boys started with a bang. They annexed nine points before the home team counted. South Amherst was going strong at the finish, but the Kipton team had been weakened by the absence of their captain, who played only the first half. Fast work was displayed by each team and both schools should feel proud of the good, clean work of their teams.

The lineup and summary: Kipton 29, South Amherst 23. Whitney, ... S. Amherst 23. Davidson, ... R. F. VonKanel. Perkins, ... L. F. Schacht. Bayless, ... C. Flowers. Hudson, ... R. G. Gleason. Substitutions—Wynn for Bayless.

Field Goals—Davidson 6, VonKanel 5, Whitney 5, Bayless 3, Schacht 2, Flowers 2, Leonard 1, VonKanel 1, Bayless 2. Leonard 1. Referee—Mr. Powers of North Amherst.

JUNIOR CHURCH GRADE LEAGUES IN FAST GAMES

The games in the Junior Church and Grammar school basketball league at the Y. M. C. A. still upheld their good brand of playing Saturday afternoon in their regular schedule of games.

In the first game of the Junior church league the Episcopal kept up their winning streak and defeated the strong First Congregational five 10 to 8. E. West played the best game for the winners while Glover did good work for the losers. The second game also proved to be an upset as the Second Congregational team turned the tide and won from the Catholics with an 18 to 9 score. Barton and Hengartner played a fine game for the winners and Horan for the losers. The Methodist springing a comeback in the last half won from the Church of Christ by the close score of 9 to 6. All of the players on both teams put up a scrappy game.

The games in the Grammar school league were also hotly contested and in the first game the small Ely team defeated the Jefferson school 10 to 8. The players on both teams worked fine together and no one player stood out. In the second game the Franklin school team continued their winning streak by defeating the Hamilton five, 19 to 1. Berger was the star of this game, scoring 15 of his teams points. McKinley school also won their game by defeating the Gates team 21 to 4. Barnes and Robinson put up a good game for the winners and Whitacre for the losers.

The Junior officials corps handled the officiating and did a fine piece of work in all of the games.

BARBERTON SWAMPS AMHERST HIGH FIVE

AMHERST, Feb. 12.—The Amherst High basketball team was swamped by the Barberton High five at Barberton Saturday evening by a 44-12 score. Amherst started the scoring when Linehosh looped in a neat side shot but the down states soon took the lead. The defensive work of the locals was poor in the first half and the B. H. S. lads ran up 31 points to the locals 6.

In the third quarter the Amherst lads held Barberton to three points and accounted for 2 themselves. Linehosh, Baumhardt and Bruce each looped in a field goal and Menz accounted for the other six points secured by the A. H. S. lads from the foul line.

Crown starred for Barberton with 9 field goals.

Abraham Lincoln—

Studied by the glow of a pine knot—what if he had had an electric light

PEEP OF DAY

Lincoln, the man of destiny, studied late into the night, by the light of pine knots and the glow of burning logs. He kept his book in a crack in the logs by his bed to have on hand at the First Peep of Day.

Had Lincoln had the benefit of electric light he would not have had to wait until the peep of dawn before resuming his studies. Just the turning of the button and this most beloved of all Americans could have been reading and studying his books.

Who can say what more this great intellect would have produced had he lived in these days of modern lighting and facilities for studying. Did the handicap of the burning logs and the pine knots deprive the world, to some extent at least, of perhaps other gems of thought and words of wisdom?

What a boon the electric light would have been to Lincoln—think of his joy after the day's work to have come home and continued his reading by the modern electric light. His two great passions were for mankind and for knowledge. His whole nature yearned for information. The few books he had he loved—they were living personalities to him. How happy you would be if you could have given Lincoln books—what a feeling of joy you would have if you could have lived in his day—had electric lights in your home and invited this great hearted man to study in ease and comfort by your reading lamp.

It is a long step from the pine knot to the modern electric light.
